Trying to be more active?
Let LifeWorks Wellness help you get started.

Exercise plays a major role in maintaining a healthy weight, lowering your risk for heart disease and other medical issues, and boosting your energy. If you’re looking for ways to start exercising more, here are a few tips.

- First—talk with your health care provider, especially if you don't currently exercise regularly or if you have any medical conditions such as diabetes, high blood pressure, heart disease, obesity, or a family history of heart attack or high blood pressure.
- Start small. Research shows that exercising for 10 minutes three times a day provides many of the same health benefits as exercising for 30 minutes straight.
- Look into structured exercise activities, such as a class at a gym or your local Y. If you prefer to work out at home, try an exercise DVD, or see if your TV service includes on-demand workout videos.
- Plan ahead for exercise. Block off time in your daily schedule for exercise. Try not to exercise too close to bedtime so that it doesn’t keep you awake.
- Find other people to exercise with you. Take a bike ride with your child or make a date to walk or jog with a friend or your partner.
- Set exercise goals and reward yourself when you reach them. For example, if you manage to exercise three times a week for a month, treat yourself to something special.

Need more ideas? You can work with a personal LifeWorks health coach on the phone or online to help you make a plan to start and stick with an exercise program. Or go to www.lifeworks.com and click on Wellness Tools under Quick Links to access helpful, easy-to-use online tools. Try our exercise planner to help you set exercise goals, record daily exercise in a health log, or try an Exercise Workshop.

Call LifeWorks at 888-267-8126 and ask about how health coaching can work for you or visit www.lifeworks.com (username: university; password: dayton) and click on the Wellness feature to enroll online.